Cushman and Pratt Produce Record-Breaking Performances at 2013 National JROTC Championship

By Ashley Brugnone, CMP Writer

ANNISTON, Ala. – Teams and individuals made the haul to the CMP South facilities in Anniston, AL to compete in the National JROTC Championships March 21-23, 2013. Over 7,300 cadets around the country participated in the CMP Postal competitions this year, with 890 moving on to their branch's Service Competition. A total of 212 JROTC athletes competed at the National JROTC Championship, displaying the top JROTC shooters in the nation.

"We've got some great kids here – very talented shooters," said Larry Pendergrass, chief range officer for the event.

The championship was broken down into two days of competition and finals. Gold, silver and bronze medalists were determined from each day's combined scores and final results. Overall winners were established after the two-day competition was complete.

At the end of the first day of competition, Hunter Cushman, 16, of King George High School in King George, VA, led the sporter division with an aggregate score of 564, securing him a spot in the finals. Todd Mazur, 18, of Killeen High School in Killeen, TX, followed close behind with a combined score of 563. In third at the end of Day 1 was Preston Barnette, 17, of Moss Point High School in Moss Point, MS, who fired a 560.

Also firing in the final match of the day was Giovanni Gutierrez of East Aurora High School in Aurora, IL, Alexi Henry of Wagener-Salley High School in Wagener, SC, Rachel Mangan of Walhalla High School in Walhalla, SC, Alex Bapties of Cumberland High School in Cumberland, VA and Jared Sarkela of North Brunswick High School in Leland, NC.

Benjamin Estes, 17, of Ozark High School in Ozark, MO, was at the top of the precision class at the conclusion of record fire on Day 1, achieving an aggregate score of 592. Colt Gross, 17, of North Augusta High School in North Augusta, SC, fired a score of 590, while Marissa Furney, 18, of Columbus High School in Columbus, GA, rounded out the Top 3 with a combined score of 589 to advance to the Finals.

Marissa Furney had a cow as she won first overall in the precision class.

The shooters took time to smile as they competed at the prestigious event.

Many talented shooters attended the competition, recording some of the highest scores in the event's existence and breaking several records.

Next to Furney on the firing line followed Frank Hargadon of Shelby County High School in Shelbyville, KY, Rebecca Godwin of North Forsyth High School in Cumming, GA, Logan Hunt of Ozark High School, Duncan Pawloski of Lady Bird Johnson High School in San Antonio, TX, and defending champion Heather Kirby of Shelby County High School.

After a hard fought, back-and-forth match, Hunter Cushman was able to come out on top, taking home the Day 1 gold medal in the sporter class after firing a 655.2 aggregate score. Following closely throughout the final match was Todd Mazur, who finished with an aggregate score of 652.9 and walked out of the range with the Day 1 silver medal. The bronze medal went to Rachel Mangan, 18, who climbed her way from 6th to 3rd place by the time the last pellet was fired in the final. She finished with a combined score of 646.3.

Cushman managed to set two new Navy JROTC National Records in both 3x20 and 3x20 plus final with scores of 564-23 and 655.2 to open Day 1 of the competition. He also set the Navy JROTC kneeling record of 193-7.

In precision, Furney, Gross, Godwin, Kirby, Pawloski and Hunt all returned to fire in the final. Joining them was Mary Pratt of Monroe Area High School in Monroe, GA, who shot a qualifying score of 592, and Brandon Muske of Brenham High School in Brenham, TX, with a qualifying score of 588.

After a close match, Pratt, 15, came out on top, firing an aggregate score of 694.2. Furney earned the silver medal with her score of 692.9, followed closely by Gross, who finished with a combined score of 690.6.

Not only did Pratt earn gold around her neck, she also set a new National record for the Air Force JROTC 3x20 and 3x20 plus final with scores of 592-46 and 694.2. She also tied the Air Force kneeling record of 199-16 and a final score of 102.2.

In overall results, Cushman led the sporter division after shooting a 1222.8 over the course of the weekend. Mazur finished in 2nd place with an aggregate score of 1211.5, and Mangan trailed in 3rd place with a score of 1207.25.

Mary Pratt set a new National record for the Air Force JROTC 3x20 and the 3x20 plus final during the match.

Mary Simonton was challenged on the final day of competition when her precision rifle fell to pieces. Thankfully, she had a replacement ready and still fired a respectable score.

Hunter Cushman set two new Navy JROTC National records in the 3x20 and 3x20 plus final on Day 1 of the competition. On Day 2, he broke them again.

Coaches and spectators watched intently as the shooters put all of their hard work to the test over the two-day event.

"I didn't know what to think coming into the weekend. I just tried to shoot my best," Cushman said. "I'm on top of the world right now."

Furney topped the overall precision class with her score of 1281.2, followed by Gross who fired an aggregate score of 1280.6. Pratt took home the bronze medal after finishing the match with a 1280.2 – only four-tenths behind Gross.

Carl Hayden High School was dubbed the overall sporter class team champions. Team members are Alan Rodriguez, Nestor Alvarez, David Nieto and Mario Saenz. They are coached by SFC John Coredero-Torres. The team received a $350 merchandise certificate from Daisy Outdoor Products as well as a Crosman Challenger Air Rifle.

Ozark High School stood at the top of the podium as the precision class team champions. This year was the third year in a row Ozark has won the overall team competition – once in sporter, twice in precision. Members are Benjamin Estes, Logan Hunt, Makennon Doran and Shelby Brummett. They are coached by 1SG Terry Thompson. The team also set an Army JROTC National record with a team score of 2346-142.

"I'm blessed with a bunch of great kids, and they work really, really hard," said 1SG Thompson.

"They're like family. I'm so proud of them."

Monroe Area High School was also recognized for setting the new Air Force JROTC 3x20 team National record with a score of 2305-132.

The Junior Distinguished Badge is awarded for consistent excellence in major three-position air rifle competitions over an extended period of time. The highest-ranking competitors in state and national level competitions can earn a maximum of ten points in one competition and must earn 30 total points to receive the badge. The top 50% of the Non-Distinguished competitors in this championship earned between four and eight points each. The first Junior Distinguished Badge was awarded in 2001. Since then, 562 junior shooters have earned this prestigious badge.

Ozark Fights Adversity to Win Two Straight National JROTC Precision Titles

By Ashley Brugnone, CMP Writer

ANNISTON, Ala. — “Honestly, winning the National Championship isn’t anything compared to the journey it took to get here,” said Makennon Doran.

The Ozark High School senior from Ozark, MO, summed up his team’s experiences of winning their second JROTC National Championship precision team title after only two years of existence by saying, “We came and knocked it out.”

Coach 1SG Terry Thompson has been with the Ozark rifle team for 18 years. Up until last year, he has only brought sporter teams to the National Championship, winning three National sporter team titles since 2008. Last year was the team’s first year competing in the precision class.

The shift into precision began two years ago when a very talented Ozark sporter shooter decided she wanted to take her shooting ability into the collegiate world. Tessa Howald had always aspired to be on a college rifle team, and she knew that she had the right attitude, support and coach behind her on her search for her dream.

“I knew for her to get good, honest looks by colleges, she was probably going to have to switch to precision,” said Thompson. “I talked with her about that and I talked with her parents.”

With encouragement from her family and teammates, she made the difficult change, and quite successfully. Besides helping her team along to the National title in precision in 2012, she also held many JROTC records. She eventually joined the Murray State University rifle team in Murray, KY.

Inspired by her lead, others on her Ozark team began to show interest in shooting in college, fueling their drive towards a switch to the precision class.

“It wasn’t an easy transition – not as easy as we thought it would be,” added Logan Hunt, another senior on the Ozark precision team.

“We had some very progressive sporter shooters move up to precision,” said Thompson. “Unfortunately, we’re not financially set to where we’ve got a surplus of precision equipment. Each one of our kids has bought their own equipment, so it took a commitment from them.”

Each shooter had to spend around $3,000 to $4,000 on precision equipment to prepare themselves for their new style of shooting. Some got jobs, some received money from family members, and some even received donations from the community.

“The community of Ozark is really supportive of our JROTC program in general, and they really like the rifle team,” said Shelby Brummett, the lone female senior on the Ozark precision team. “The fancy equipment was nice.”

One of the other challenges in forming the precision team, besides the cost for the shooters, was within Coach Thompson, who had never coached a precision team before. Through talking to other coaches, watching gifted shooters and patience, Thompson began to gain a better understanding of how he could best help his shooters along.

“I had no idea how to coach differently between sporter and precision, so it took me a while. I have slowly picked it up,” he said. “I’m blessed with a bunch of great kids, and they work really, really hard.”

After months of training, the team members put their new precision skills to the test as they traveled to the 2012 Army JROTC Service Championship, not knowing what to expect during the much-anticipated and prestigious event. Though nervous, Coach Thompson, who had watched his team grow and develop during their demanding practice schedule, had confidence in his shooters.

"I started looking at them and watching them, and I could see they were doing pretty good," he said. "I could see that they were special."

The new Ozark precision team stunned everyone by taking home gold medals in their first JROTC Service Championship as competitors in the precision class. And, as if that wasn't enough, they went on to win the JROTC National Championship team competition in Anniston, AL, overtaking the defending champions, Shelby County High School, by eight commanding points.

"When we won the Service Championship, I thought, it's possible we could win it all. I think we snuck up on everybody," said Thompson. "The kids were tickled to death. They were ecstatic. There were a whole bunch of tears shed."

With "National Champion" rings on their fingers, given to them by their school, and CMP medals around their necks, the team returned to a proud home state. Besides getting to meet the mayor of Ozark, the team was also invited to the state capitol in Jefferson City, MO, where they were introduced on the floor of the State Capitol building.

"It was pretty special," said Coach Thompson.

This year, the team returned to Anniston with new members and fresh attitudes. Because Coach Thompson teaches his shooters to only focus on their next shot instead of things that have happened in the past, the team walked in as if it was their first time on the range.

"We never talk about wins and losses. We just always try to focus on what we can control and how we compete," he said. "The kids don't even know their scores during the matches. We don't discuss it."

At the end of Day 1 of the 2013 competition, the Ozark team had no idea they were leading the pack. Though at the top of their game, the day that followed wasn't without its struggles.

Benjamin Estes, one of their top shooters, became ill during the match. After having to rush to a nearby bathroom, he still managed to shoot his match and fire a respectable score. Shelby Brummett, normally one of the strongest standing shooters, struggled with the position, but came back to fire her personal high in kneeling.

"They could have easily folded, but they didn't," said Coach Thompson. "They stayed tough all through the match."

After they fired their final shots and walked off the range on Day 2, they didn't even glance up at the scoring monitors to see where they ranked – they were completely unaware that they had just won their second National Championship precision title.

Tired after a long two days of competition, the team members anxiously waited in the lobby outside of the range for their coach to meet them.

"Your heart's pumping, you start getting hot and sweaty, and you're just like, something's going to happen, I don't know if it's good or bad, but something's going to happen," explained Brummett as she smiled and laughed.

Then, the proud coach followed behind, eager to give his team the news.

"I told them they had done it again. There were a whole bunch of tears shed again," he said. "Every National Championship is a special moment. To tell yourself that, well, at this time, I'm the best."

Hunt, unable to keep his feelings to himself, immediately began to bawl genuine tears when he heard his coach utter those words – something he will never forget, and something his teammates aren't soon to let him forget.

"It was an emotional experience," said Hunt as he smiled. "All of the hard work, and finally knowing that is all paid off eventually."

"It was a trip, but it was worth it," added Doran.

Sentiments were high between the team members and their coach as they stood above the crowd together on the podium at the JROTC Nationals for the last time. An obvious bond is noticeable from the team that has been joined by years of adversity and determination.

"They are family, really. They're almost like a son or daughter to me," Coach Thompson explained. "You get close to them because we spend a lot of time together. They're going to be missed."

His team members share the devotion.

"We're his extended family," Brummett said. "It's not wins that define a coach. It's the stuff on the side. He teaches us life lessons that I probably would have never gotten if I wasn't in the rifle program."

"He's the most influential man I've ever met," she added, as she smiled.

His three seniors off to college, having signed letters of intent to NCAA rifle teams, Coach Thompson must look to the future of his team. With their now ample experience with precision at the highest levels of competition, Ozark has a new tradition of rifle shooting to uphold, and their coach is ready to see what other heights his team can reach.

"We're just going to have to see if I have another shooter willing to step up to shoot precision," he said. "Hopefully we can keep the tradition going."

Ozark High School Army JROTC, Missouri, won the 2012 team championship in the precision air rifle class with an aggregate score of 4645. It was the first time Ozark has fielded a precision air rifle team. Team members are, Makennon Doran, Logan Hunt, Tessa Howald and Shelby Brummett.
